WANT THE COAL LANDS OF ALASKA LEASED SO COUNTRY CAN DEVELOP

Governor in Annual Report Declares That Development Is Being Retarded and Railroad Building Delayed.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 25.—Expressing it as his opinion that the want of cheap fuel and the delay in opening the Alaska coal fields are the strongest adverse factors in the present problem of territorial progress, governor Walter F. Clark, of Alaska, in his annual report to the secretary of the interior, made public today, declares that "the ill-advised policy of forbidding all development of the large coal resources of Alaska, or of placing such restrictions upon development as to make the embarkation of private capital impossible, is to be deprecated, while the policy of conservation by proper use is to be encouraged."

Railroad Suspends. The present impossibility of mining coal, either under title or lease, he explains, is in a measure responsible for the suspension of one of the principal railroads. This has caused a general feeling of discouragement over the business situation in those parts of Alaska where development and settlement ought to be going on most rapidly.

Governor Clark says it appeared in public discussion of the subject that the opposition to opening the Alaska coal fields "springs chiefly from two sources—those persons who fear a monopoly and those who would have this coal held as a reserve supply for the future." He further says that while the present coal law is not a good one, "it certainly lends no help to monopoly, but rather is calculated to discourage the embarkation of capital."

Wants Lands Developed. In declaring his hope for the adoption of the leasing system to develop these lands, governor Clark says: "It will be found quite feasible, according to the best authorities, to devise suitable terms for leases, protecting both the public and the operators, and insuring intelligent production."

The governor says that the view of the extremists that all the Alaskan coal should be kept as a reserve supply, has nothing to commend it. A conservative estimate, he says, made by Alfred H. Brooks, of the geological survey, shows that at the present rate of consumption the marketable Alaska coals would last five or six thousand years. "At the end of that period," he continues, "posterity may be using solar energy or some other means other than coal for light, heat and power."

Railroad Building. Little progress has been made in railroad building in the northwest territory during the past year, it is asserted. The officers of the Alaska Northern railway, which may tap the Manzanilla coal fields, declare that the principal factor in preventing a continuation of construction is the unsettled state of the coal land question and the inability of any citizen to obtain title or lease to these lands.

Governor Clark recommends government aid for the railroads in the form of a guarantee of interest on their bonds. He declares that the opening of new wagon roads and trails, with the accompanying lower freight rates on supplies, has enabled mines to be carried on in districts which either could not have opened at all at a time.

HEALTH AND INCOME

Both Kept Up on Scientific Food.

Good sturdy health helps one a lot to make money.

With the loss of health one's income is liable to shrink, if not entirely dwindle away.

When a young lady has to make her own living, good health is her best asset.

"I am alone in the world," writes a Chicago girl, "dependent on my own efforts for my living. I am a clerk, and about two years ago through close application to work and a boarding-house diet, I became a nervous invalid, and got so bad off it was almost impossible for me to stay in the office a half day at a time."

"A friend suggested to me the idea of trying Grape-Nuts food which I did, making it a large part of at least two meals a day."

"Today, I am free from brain-tire, dyspepsia, and all the ills of an over-worked and improperly nourished brain and body. To Grape-Nuts I owe the recovery of my health, and the ability to retain my position and income."

or would have offered only a precarious opportunity to the miner.

The governor recommends that under the present conditions of fuel supply in Alaska and until the territory reaches a more advanced stage of development, the government should make no charge on the cutting of firewood.

It is also recommended that large portions, if not all, of the Chugach national forest be restored to the public domain, as many thousands of acres of this reservation are almost treeless, and the conditions are such as to render any measures for the conservation of water absurdly unnecessary. Agricultural possibilities in the territory, declares the governor, are no longer in doubt.

Changes in Mining Law. Certain changes in the mining law are recommended. These are characterized to discourage speculation among non-resident claimants who give powers of attorney to some person in the territory.

Signal corps men who have charge of the telegraph system in Alaska are commended by the governor. They endure great hardships in the maintenance of some of the lines and are "to be commended for their brave efforts which result in keeping the lines open with remarkably few interruptions." He declares the ocean cable will have to be replaced in a few years "unless a large improvement in wireless communication takes place."

The visit of attorney general Wickensham and secretary of commerce and labor to Alaska in July and August, he says, "was extremely gratifying to the people."

Defect in Code Laws. Discussing the "serious defect" in the code laws caused by the absence of legal requirement for the regulation of births, marriages and deaths in the territory, the governor says: "Instances have multiplied in the past few years illustrating in a striking way the evils which must surely result from the absence of vital records."

Domestic coal to the value of $296,353 was shipped to Alaska from the United States during the fiscal year ended June 30, according to the report. In addition to this, foreign coal valued at $354,435 was imported during the year, bringing the total of all coal importations for the year up to $650,788. The increase in the total value of the domestic coal imported during the year over 1909 was $26,121.

Domestic Importations. The importations of domestic merchandise from the United States, including coal, lumber, hardware and machinery, provisions, liquors, etc., showed an increase in 1910 over 1909 of $78,592.

Merchandise and precious metals shipped from Alaska to the United States during 1910 amounted to $24,628,555, an increase over 1909 of $292,100, according to the report.

THIS MAN IS THE RACEHORSE FAN

George Burton Has Had Some Experiences That Amply Qualify Him.

George Burton, comedian with the Raymond Teal company at the Happy Hour, is the champion race track fan in the town. Burton picks the winners for every member of the show—he announces his selections; then the members bet on some other horse and generally win—and he often picks one for himself. This is known to have occurred several times when all the other horses were scratched or stuck at the post. Burton once traveled from Oklahoma City to Okmulgee on a train with three trainers and four other breeders. Since that time he has always had "the dope on the ponies" whenever he was close to the track, and he has often won big sums and been just about to cash in when some rude fellow hampered on the door and shouted that an actor was going to be late to rehearsal if he didn't get up in a jiffy. Raymond Teal, authority for this, also vouches for the fact that Burton has several times owned big stables of fast horses, but the fellow always deprived him of them in the same unceremonious manner. This racing fever is "ingrown" in the popular comedian, Teal says, and Burton would take chances on a winner if he had to seek that real diamond of his—not the big sum he has made as a dapper dandy patron when he was a producer there, but the real one, the big four carat fellow that cost him almost a week's salary.

Burton wasn't even cured the time he got out of a county fair in Kansas to clean up all the bookies—but didn't. That particular time Burton got acquainted with a very sociable jockey on the train, who tipped him off to "the real winners" at the county fair. The Teal company was just passing through the town, but Burton dropped off and decided to go to the track, "clean the bookies," and catch the next train. He was dead sure that his friend, the jockey, was all to the good and he bought him a nice dinner in the dining car and a drink or two. Then Burton tipped all the other members of the company on how to play when they got to Kansas City (books were being made there), and got off to make his "cleanup." Some of the company took the time and were waiting with stuffed clubs for Burton, at the station when he got in that night, craving out of the side door of a big car marked "capacity so and so," and darted around the corner as fast as an ant, to get out of the snow, for his overcoat he had left back at the county fair, along with everything else he had. And the jockey who had given him the "inside information" on the train—well, the "jockey" was really the man who was making the books on the races at the fair. Teal, as usual, had bet on a horse that didn't select to win and had enough ready cash to loan Burton to buy a new overcoat.

LET YOUR STOMACH HAVE ITS OWN WAY.

Do Not Try to Drive and Force it to Work When It Is Not Able to. You Will Suffer All the More.

You cannot treat your stomach as some men treat a balky horse; force, drive or even starve it into doing work at which it rebels. The stomach is a patient and faithful servant and it stands much abuse and ill-treatment before it "balks," but when it does you had better go slow with it and not attempt to make it work. Some people make the mistake of trying to force it to make it work by starving themselves. They might cure the stomach that way, but it would take so long that they would have no use for a stomach when they got through. The sensible way out of the difficulty is to let the stomach rest if it wants to and employ a substitute to do its work.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do the work of your stomach for you and digest your food just as your stomach used to when it was well. You can prove this by putting your food in a glass jar with one of the tablets and sufficient water and you will see the food digested in just the same time as the digestive fluids of your stomach would do it. That will satisfy your mind. Now, to satisfy both your mind and body take one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after eating—eat all that you want—and you will feel in your mind that your food is being digested because you will feel no disturbance or weight in your stomach; in fact, you will forget all about having a stomach, just as you did when you were a healthy baby.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets act in a natural way because they contain only the natural elements of the gastric juices and other digestive fluids of the stomach. It makes no difference what condition the stomach is in, they go right ahead of their own accord and do their work. They know their business and surrounding conditions do not influence them in the least. They thus relieve the weak stomach of all its burdens and give it much-needed rest and permit it to become strong and healthy.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box. They are so well known and their popularity is so great that a druggist would as soon think of being out of alcohol or quinine as of them. In fact, physicians are prescribing them all over the land, and if your own doctor is real honest with you, he will tell you frankly that there is nothing on earth so good for dyspepsia as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

AMUSEMENTS.

GOOD HAPPY HOUR SHOW.

Raymond Teal's blackface specialty alone worth the admission to the Happy Hour this week. The show itself, a musical burlesque on "The Mikado," is full of good things. The costumes are almost gorgeous, the music is good, the various roles well essayed and the electrical effects beautiful. The chorus of 12 is one of the finest El Paso has ever seen, even in the biggest shows; the uniformity of the dancing, marching and drilling is superb, and the costumes costly and pretty. Anybody ought to enjoy seeing this bill Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. It is worth more than the money charged. Comparing it to a dollar and a half attraction, it is as good as many of them.

THEATRICAL WAR IS REALLY OVER

Klaw & Erlanger Book Their First Show of the Season at El Paso

That the theatrical war is really over is best evidenced when the warring factions begin "working in the same harness." That they are doing this is certain. Frank Rich has received a booking from Klaw & Erlanger for his El Paso theater. This shows that the truce reported from New York was a reality and now both the independents and "the syndicate"—Klaw & Erlanger—are booking the same houses, as usual at this time only independent attractions had been booked. The booking just received from Klaw & Erlanger is "Polly of the Circus," one of the best on the road, owned by Frederick Thompson. It will be here January 22-23.

Mr. Rich has also received the contract of Mary Mannering, who was booked for El Paso last Monday and did not come. She will be here December 21. Miss Mannering is managed by the independents.

MEXICAN KILLED BY CAVEIN AT PARRAL MINE.

News comes from Parral that Pedro Armendarez, a mine laborer, was killed by a cavein on the second level south of the Santa Gertrudis mine, situated near the Minas Nuevas district, near Parral. About 50 other men narrowly escaped death at the same time.

The men were working in the tunnel of the old drift that had been timbered about three days before. The drift ran through very ground, but it was known to be very heavy.

The cavein was comparatively small, covering a distance of about five meters along the drift. The dead man left no family.

FIRE ALARM GOES ON A RAMPAGE; SCARES WOMAN

Owing to the valve of the fire alarm whistle becoming stuck at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, a series of blasts were emitted that caused somewhat of a panic in the downtown business district. Residents of the city also became alarmed and a number of telephone calls to central office were made by interested patrons.

One excited woman 15 minutes after the "scare whistle," telephoned to central and asked if the story was true that a flood of water was sweeping down the Rio Grande.

Children Cause Fire.

Children and matches caused a fire at 416 1/2 North Oregon street at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The blaze, which gained some headway in a waste paper box, was soon extinguished by the central fire department.
